LIFE SCIENCES PRACTICE GROUP

SGL's Life Sciences Practice Group represents manufacturers and distributors of medical devices, home-use medical devices, over the counter drugs, pharmaceuticals, nutraceuticals, nutritional supplements, and other home health care products. Our representation includes FDA, FTC and CPSC regulatory compliance and investigations, as well as litigation throughout the United States. We appreciate that businesses in the life sciences industry traverse new frontiers daily, requiring us to keep abreast of current issues affecting their business, as well as anticipating future issues.

We provide a full array of legal services – including risk management, regulatory compliance, manufacturing and distribution agreements, licensing agreements and litigation services – all provided within the framework of our clients' specific business so as to address each client's specific needs.

SGL prides itself on understanding our clients and the science behind their products so that we are better positioned to advise them on how to achieve their unique goals. Our strategic advice is provided in a simple and straight forward manner, enabling our clients to comprehend our advice and its potential ramifications. We appreciate that there is a tremendous advantage to selecting the right team with the right knowledge and experience. Our attorneys bring a diversity of perspectives that is critical to the development of winning strategies.
